QUALIFIED WITHDRAWAL GUIDELINES

- The Trust will only send the amount withdrawn directly to the school you currently attend or plan to attend.
- Your school must be an “eligible educational institution,” as defined in Section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code. Generally, an “eligible educational institution” is a postsecondary educational, vocational or proprietary institution that is eligible to participate in the Department of Education’s Title IV Financial Aid Programs. You should check with your school to determine whether or not it participates in these financial aid programs before submitting this form.
- If you are attending the University of California, visit <http://www.ucop.edu/sas/sfs/gsp.htm> to obtain the proper mailing address for your school. Then write the mailing address in Section 2 of this form.
- You are NOT required to submit bills, receipts or other substantiation of qualified higher education expenses along with this form.

Qualified Higher Education Expenses are:

- Tuition and fees;
- Costs of books, supplies and equipment required for the enrollment or attendance at an eligible educational institution; and
- Certain amounts for room and board.

- Use of Withdrawn Scholarship Funds for Room and Board You are subject to federal income taxation on the portion of your withdrawal used for room and board in the year it was withdrawn. Section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code requires that withdrawals from the Trust for room and board costs not exceed certain limits. These limits are as follows: For students living at home with parents, as well as students not living in campus provided housing, the student’s school’s “cost of attendance” allowance for room and board under federal financial aid programs will be treated as the qualified expense. For students living on campus, the amount of room and board treated as qualified expense can be the actual amount charged to the student, even if it is greater than the “cost of attendance” allowance. You must also be enrolled in a certificate-granting program at least halftime to use your scholarship funds for room and board.
- Return of Withdrawn Scholarship Funds You must return to the Trust for redeposit into your Account any portion of a qualified withdrawal that is refunded by your school to you, or to anyone else on your behalf, if not immediately used by you for other qualified higher education expenses.
- Tax Considerations The GSP have been designed so that scholarship awards, including the earnings, used for certain qualified higher education expenses while a student is pursuing a postsecondary degree will not be subject to federal income taxation. Pursuing such a degree is generally defined as a student (full or half-time) who:
 1. Is pursuing a degree at a college or university, or
 2. Attends an eligible educational institution that is authorized to provide:
 - A program that is acceptable for full credit towards a bachelors or higher degree, or
 - A program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation.

Any portion of the scholarship awards or earnings withdrawn as payment of room and board costs will be subject to federal income tax in the tax year it was withdrawn. Students must report such amount to the Internal Revenue Service when filing their federal income tax return. Similarly, any portion of a scholarship award used to pay for qualified higher education expenses at correspondence schools may not be eligible for federal tax-exempt treatment.

Notwithstanding the design of the GSP, the Internal Revenue Service could take the position that all scholarship awards are subject to federal income taxation in the year the student is notified of the award. Students and their families should consult their tax advisors regarding the federal tax treatment of scholarship awards.

California law provides that these scholarship awards, (including the earnings but excluding any portion of the awards used for payment of room and board costs) are exempt from California income tax.

GOVERNOR'S SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAMS' GUIDELINES

- The total balance in an Account will be sufficient to fully cover all qualified higher education expenses of attending an institution of higher education following admission.

General Legal Implications

- All scholarship awards and earnings are owned by the State of California (not the student), until the award recipient directs the scholarship funds to be paid directly to an eligible educational institution.
- The award recipient's right to claim a scholarship award or use it to pay qualified higher education expenses at the eligible educational institution he or she is attending cannot be transferred to anyone.
- Neither the scholarship award nor earnings will be considered an asset of the student's estate if he or she were to die.
- If used for qualified higher education expenses (except room and board expenses), the scholarship award (and any earnings) should not be considered taxable income to the beneficiary when deposited into the Account or when withdrawn.
- The scholarship award and earnings can only be used to pay qualified higher education expenses.

Loss of Scholarship Funds

- Scholarship funds can ONLY be used for qualified higher education expenses.
- The following circumstances will result in the forfeiture of scholarship funds in the Account if the award recipient:

 - c. Dies.
 - d. Becomes disabled such that he or she cannot attend an eligible educational institution.
